LOWBORN
By Kerry Hudson

Fri 17 Jan 12.30pm in Cafe

‘When every day of your life you have been told you have nothing of value to offer, that you are worth nothing to society, can you ever escape that sense of being ‘lowborn’ no matter how far you’ve come?’

Kerry Hudson’s novel ‘Lowborn’ is presented as a one-woman performance of stories from her working class childhood. Told amidst the sizzle of hot oil and the scent of salt and vinegar, audiences are led into an unrelenting, bittersweet story of council flats, feckless men, the release found in libraries, and the determination to escape.

So come down to the chip shop and prepare to step inside a spectacular book brought to life by Story Machine Productions.

MANKIND

The text of ‘Mankind’ was written and first played in East Anglia around 1465. It is a lively social satire, in which the farmer Mankind must choose between good and evil. At first he tries to improve himself, but finds it easier to join a band of ruffians. He is seduced by a glamorous lady Devil, is almost driven to suicide, finds it hard to apologise, but finally redeems himself.

Mankind is written for five actors, a singer, a small choir and five instrumentalists. The music draws on neo-classicism and folk-music, following a style of musical theatre developed by Brecht and Kurt Weill in the 1920s, and later taken on by Britten in such works as ‘Noye’s Fludde’. 16+
